AUGUSTA, MAINE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1887.

Trotting at Fairfield Next Week.

The Maine Colt races this year promise to be of interest to the lookers on and of great value to the breeders.

We find that there are six in the one year old class, nine in the two, six in the three and only two in the four.

This is surely an indication of the interest fell by colt-breeders, and the races will be a credit to the State. Many of the colts are entered in the New England Colt races to be held at Mystic in Sept., and they will want to try titles here before fighting a race with outsiders.

Mr. Geraid has labored hard to secure a good field of colts and one that will represent the character of the stock being bred in Maise. In return, those, interested in horse breeding should feel under obligations to visit the Fairfield track, Aug. 18, and witness the trials of speed.

Additional attractions are offered in the following purses, open to all horses owned in Maine.

The Fire Relief Association (Grange) of Wayne county, New York, shows by its last annual report that it has $1,760,000 of risks in force, a gain of $340,000 over the previous year. The losses sustained within the year amounted to $3,371.75. The cost for the year was two mills on the dollar. The cost for nine years on $1,000 was $5.23.

Now look for potato rot: The extreme wet and intense and continued heat are just the conditions which start the rot into activity. Already it has made its appearance on the early potatoes. This is cash business, and farmers of that vicinity can do no better than to push it to the utmost canacity of their farms.

The late rains have started the grass so that pastures are excellent for the season, yet in most cases it will be best to give the cows at this time an extra feed at the barn either of some green crop grown for the purpose, or from the hay stored in the barn. Some time since we noted in the Farmer that the American Jersey Cattle Club had tendered a prize of $100 to each of the lithas a del state Fairs of the different States, to be given as a premium to the best herd of registered Jerseys exhibited at the Fair the coming autumn. The officers of the Maine State Agricultural Society have received notice that the above named sum is awaiting their action. The judges are to be ing their action. The judges are to be named by the State Society. This, together with the society's premium of $30, makes markets are up a prize worth contending for, and will mot be overlooked by our many enterpristime been p men:

"This ticket has probably been paid for a dozen times over by the paper to which it is issued. It will be honored in the hands of any man, woman or child, white or black, red or yellow, who favors the association by presenting it. It is good for entrance and grand stand, and the bearer, if driving, will be entitled to pass a team free. The sesciation recognizes the fact that its splendid success is owing largely, if not wholly, to the notices so freely given it by the press, and while we cannot render an equivalent in cash, we return our grateful thanks."

smiths, Powell & Lamb write to the Rural New Yorker: "We soil our cattle as little as possible, preferring, when we can, to give them pasturage, but our pasturage is limited. We give rye, clover, oats, and corn for soiling. Our cattle are now on pasture, and we trust a late rain will help our grass so as to allow us to keep them out. Our idea is that while soiling is cheaper, the animals need all the fresh air and exercise they can get, and which they can obtain in no better way than by grasing." This is good sound sense. The health and constitutional vigor of a herd is too important a matter to be overlooked. Breeding stock should not be stabled all the time in a close barn.
